ABSTRACT

MULYO PRABOWO. Human Development in the Post New Order-Schooling Education (The Study of Educational Praxis on Private Schooling Institutions in Jogjakarta Province), Dissertation, Jogjakarta: Postgraduate Program of Jogjakarta State University, 2016.

This research is aimed at deeply analyzing the human development perspective on private schooling educational institutions, and also analyzing the praxis of school education under the private schooling boards in Jogjakarta Province.

The method used in this research is inductive-qualitative by using historical-philosophical and reflective approaches. There are four research locations namely Majelis Luhur Persatuan Tamansiswa, SD Taman Muda Ibu Pawayatan TAMANSIWA, Yayasan Pendidikan Kristen BOPKRI, and SD BOPKRI Gondolayu of Jogjakarta. The research subjects of this research are the board committees/the private educational boards, principles, classroom teachers, and parents. The object of the research is human development perspective on private schooling boards and school educational praxis under the concerning boards. The data collection method used in this research are deep interview, participant observation, and documentation. The research data which are taken from field notes, documentation and interview which have been grouped and categorized are analyzed by using inductive-qualitative and reflective approaches.

The findings of the research show that 1) The educational praxis of human development perspective can be bifurcated into three categories namely normative aspect, curriculum, and learning processes. The characteristic of private schooling institutions in Yogyakarta Province is absolutely unique, since those private schooling institutions were formerly built philosophically and ideologically in the human development perspective, but in practice they could not implement this in their school institutions because of the huge government policies. In addition, the private schooling institutions which formerly apply positivistic and primordialistic philosophies, initiate innovating their institutions by changing inclusively the board foundational and operational regulations (Anggaran Dasar/Anggaran Rumah Tangga); 2) The educational praxis of the private schools start transforming their learning systems from behavioristic-positivistic to constructivistic - teacher-centered, to student-centered. This is indicated by the improvement of school infrastructures, classroom facilities, the mode of teacher relations, classroom settings, learning media, and learning assessment. The learning model is more and more constructivistic and collaborative; 3) There is a different human development perspective in the educational praxis between the national-based private schooling and religious-based private schooling institutions.
